FancyZones
by Chris Taylor

About Chris Taylor: Chris is on the Community Review Board for SANS's OUCH! security awareness newsletter designed for everyone. He is President of the Ottawa PC Users' Group and a Microsoft Windows Insider MVP.

In the ancient history of Windows 95 and XP, Microsoft released an unsupported suite of tools for the operating system called PowerToys that added nifty functionality to Windows. On May 8, 2019, Microsoft launched the open source project PowerToys for Windows 10 on GitHub. The September 5, 2019 release included an especially useful module: FancyZones.

FancyZones lets you define various zones on your desktop and have program windows fill the zones. For anyone who likes to have multiple programs visible at the same time, FancyZones is great. It's like Windows Snap on steroids.

Windows Snap can arrange application windows and works pretty well. But it has annoyances like not remembering where you had programs snapped, difficulty getting multiple programs to snap into the same section of the screen, only permitting 2, 3, or 4 areas, and only allowing easy resizing of screen areas when using 2 areas. FancyZones overcomes all those and more.

To get FancyZones, install the Windows 10 PowerToys: Browse to the repository on GitHub at <https://github.com/microsoft/PowerToys/releases/>. Scroll down to Assets at the bottom of the most recent release. Click the link to download the installer. After the download completes, run it and follow the prompts.

I recommend taking FancyZones hotkey, Win+Z (hold down)

The Taxman Cometh!

The tax man cometh... and here comes the Taxman

by Alan German

It's that time of year. Once again, you have to dig out all those slips and receipts, spread out a raft of paper forms over the kitchen table, sharpen your pencil, and dig into the preparation of your tax return. Well, of course, nobody actually uses pencil and paper any more – do they? – everyone uses the computer. But, it still irks to have to pay out good money for a commercial tax package just so you can send even more of your hard earned cash to the Canada Revenue Agency (CRA).

How to Complete a Tax Return

In a Nutshell

Click on Records and then New Person/Record and fill in a new person. Next Open T1-General, go to and complete the Worksheet and hit Update. Exit Worksheet and complete the federal forms, followed by the provincial forms, just as would fill in a paper return. Should you need to use a form not included with Taxman, you must complete the form by hand and transfer any required numbers into Taxman. You then print the Taxman forms; add all other forms, slips and receipts; assemble everything in the right order; sign where required and mail to the government. If what you enter is out of the ordinary and further elaboration is required, attach a note or write on the paper return. Explain everything — it's the safest way.

There are 5 examples to illustrate how the forms can be filled out. Double-click either the First Name or Last Name control on Persons to review the scenario for that example.

Step 0: How the Forms Work

The data-entry boxes on Taxman forms are called controls. Just place your cursor in a control and type away. If Taxman can't make sense of what you've entered, you'll receive a message. If you ever get stuck, press <Escape> to clear the control; but remember that if you hit <Escape> twice your form returns to the last saved state, possibly wiping out more than just the last entry. The status bar at the bottom left of the screen gives you the control's basic facts and tells you where double-clicking the control will get you. Some controls are locked because they receive their value from a related form (double-click to go there).

Taxman forms aren't identical to the paper forms you'll get at the Post Office. Since the computer is doing the math, all the areas where you'd be pencilling in the numbers and doing some arithmetic have been removed. Conversely, the program is sprinkled with controls not on the paper return where you can add a note and explain yourself. You can tell they're for notes because they aren't numbered and when you're in them you will see "Note" in the status bar.

CRA asks that if there is nothing to be entered in a control, then leave the control blank. This makes data-entry for them easier. The exception to this is if you are making a claim that requires the net income of a dependant or your spouse be entered. In this case you are making a declaration and so you must enter something — even if only "0.00".

Most controls work as mini calculators and will solve a valid mathematical expression before updating. If you type  $(1000+1)*2$ , the control will evaluate this to 2002;  $1,000+1*2$  will give 1002; and  $=1000+1*2$  blows up because the control will not accept the equal sign. In evaluating the expression, all commas are ignored and brackets ( ) are not seen as designating a negative value. Taxman also provides a tape calculator that can directly update a control.

Donations?

Some crazy fools have actually emailed and wanted to send me money! I immediately suspected something was up and have always refused their offers.

But... it has occurred to me that maybe there are those who are wracked with pangs of guilt. Maybe the immense debt they owe me prevents them from getting a good night's sleep?

And if that were so, it would be heartless of me not to allow these poor souls to lessen their load.

So if you feel inclined, then be sure to make all cheques payable to G. Thompson, and mail to 1424 Craddock St., Victoria, BC, V9A 5K2

HOW-TO

How to create strong, secure passwords by learning how to crack them

It gets harder to crack a password if it's 10 characters or longer—but complexity matters too, of course.

Password Experts vs an old sage

By Lawrence

Thought I would warm up the crowd to Chris's upcoming presentation "KEEPING PASSWORDS SAFE" this March 10th, with a review of current experts' password advice and my impressions of the practicalities of what's being proposed.

Let's start off with the following humorous definition of the word Expert: "A person with more data than judgment". A perfect example of this is the infamous Windows 8 upgrade from Windows 7. As we're all aware now, it was a flop, not because of the intentions of well meaning experts analyzing years of how we used Windows, but because it was those same experts not realizing that just because the majority didn't use the Windows 7 menu as intended, didn't mean we wanted the menus to be replaced. And it didn't help that it took those same experts many months to finally realize how much we wanted the start menu to stay the way it was presented in Windows 7.

A further word to the wise, as we peruse the advice below, do consider that the baddies can be just as lazy and such are looking for the low hanging fruit (i.e. people who don't patch their systems or who use the same passwords over and over again). As such, following most of the recommendations below will provide sufficient protection from being hacked.

Do not use personal information. <https://us.norton.com/internetsecurity-how-to-how-to-secure-your-passwords.html>

- Ok, in one sense this is good advice, but having a secure password doesn't mean it can't be personal and therefore something unique and easy for you to remember. Just don't make it obvious and don't overuse it (if everything you wear has the colour pink in it, I would advise against making the word pink part of your password regimen).

Don't Recycle. <https://www.consumerreports.org/digital-security/tips-for-better-passwords/>

- Yes, practical advice. Although it is advised not to re-use any password you have ever created, we humans can be pretty stubborn when it comes to keeping things easy. There's nothing wrong in keeping things fresh by mixing up or misspelling the same phrases in a way that can be remembered.

Avoid common words and character combinations in your password.

<https://www.cnet.com/how-to/9-rules-for-strong-passwords-how-to-create-and-remember-your-login-credentials/>

- Those of you that are wordsmiths won't have a problem with said advice. Many of us are not. This is where password phrasing is useful in that stringing together many common words (mixing up the occasional characters with a numeric or symbol helps) will make it easy to think up new passwords as we go through life's experiences.

Don't tell anyone your password.

<https://www.mcafee.com/blogs/consumer/family-safety/15-tips-to-better-password-security/>

- Whatever your data is (and password - login credentials are just more data) you need a good backup plan. You do not want to be the fellow that forgot the password to his now very valuable bitcoin vault. Yes, make sure you absolutely trust whomever, but remember, it's just as important to make sure your passwords (and the device that contains them) are accessible by someone if not by you (and "passing on" is just one factor to consider).

Use a password manager and a random password generator. <https://blog.avast.com/strong-password-ideas>

- No problems with the first part of this advice - the 2nd part is what I have concerns with. As much as password managers provide good support for most login needs, they won't work with all. And I don't know about you, but trying to type in a totally random set of characters can be frustrating. Like most things in life, don't be lazy about your password generation, and use life experiences to create unique sayings that can be remembered.

Avoid using two factor text - SMS (short message service) authentication. <various>

- This is technically true, especially with SIM swapping a major concern. Unfortunately, not all websites use an Authentication service (Google & Microsoft being prime examples) and if all that is offered is text - SMS, take it, as it is better than password alone.

Remember that using a unique, memorable, funny phrase for your password phrasing will help keep you ahead of the baddies.

Take care.
